Hi Eric-

I have two NH currency questions for you and will send them to you in two separate emails, with images attached.

I have come across <sup>three</sup> two notes with the same signature "J. Hull" above the interest box on two different values of the NH State April 29, 1780 notes and attach photos for you to see.

Have you ever seen these before? Since the signatures are identical and in the same location, I am assuming that there is some significance to the signature.

One note is in my collection, and one was in a recent Stack's sale.

I will send you another question with images later today or tomorrow.

Hi Eric-

Dave and I have been slow in getting to the colonial NH studies, as I am supposed to be taking the lead. So other than my own observations of notes I have seen, or own, there is not much we can add.

On Monday I will also send you scans of the 30 and 40 shilling notes that I have, together with scans of Xeroxes from other sources for comparison. These were mostly obtained from auctions, so you may have the images already.

The State of NH bought the 1744 plates about 10 years or so ago. Dave Bowers and I just saw them on April 12th at the NH State Archives. I attach a photo of the plates on display at the Archives. Unfortunately they were behind glass and difficult to photo. The text of the display reads:

These two copper printing plates for the Province of New Hampshire bank notes were purchased by the State of New Hampshire with assistance from the New Hampshire Banking Association.

The plates engraved around 1744 were used to print 40-, 20-, 10-, and 7 1/2- shilling notes primarily intended to finance armies for a Canadian expedition during King George's war between the French and English.

The copper plates were used to print bank notes after Governor Benning Wentworth, his Council and the General Assembly approved "a new emission of bills" totaling $13,000 (or pounds as they were known at the time).

The bills of credit were authorized to finance 350 "able-bodied and effective" volunteers from New Hampshire in a raid on Fort Louisbourg on Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia, Canada. The raid was to "promote the welfare of all governments of New England".

Although New Englanders took the fort on June 15, 1745, they returned it after the treaty of Aix-La-Chapelle ended the war and the terms of the treaty called for each side to give back what it won.

Eric- I have to step out of the office now, on Monday I will send you comparisons of the genuine June 20, 1776 Paul Revere notes compared to the 1850 Cohen reprints. I have several different sets of the 4 denomination Cohen reprints on different paper, and four genuine examples of three of the denominations (6 shillings, 20 shillings [2 examples] and 30 shillings). I have not yet seen a genuine 1 shilling in either the NH Historical Society, nor the American Antiquarian Society holdings. On Monday I will have my art department mark the location in a different color on the scans of what I call "Secret Marks" [using a stamp collecting term] so you can easily spot them. I haven't found any references to these anywhere, but the differences are rather obvious. One obvious difference is that the "June" slug is partially erased from the plate on the Cohen reprints, and is thus very faintly printed in comparison to the genuine note.

Best regards,

David

Dear David:

Saturday, May 05, 2007 America Online: EricNumis

I have never heard of secret marks on reprinted New Hampshire Colonial sheets and want all the info you have on that subject. I have a complete set of reprints in my holdings. I believe the original plates which were used to print the reprints are held by the NH Historical Society which also bought another original face copper plate of NH bills in a UK at auction a decade or so ago. Perhaps Dave B. knows more about this so please ask him. I hope no secret marks were cut into the plates at the time of reprinting but that is possible.

As to the counterfeit problem on the Fowle family situation please send me images of any the 30 and 40 shilling bills you have so I can study them as my time is running out on my book revision. I think I will ask Lou Jordan of Notre Dame University to check the New Hampshire or Boston newspapers of the period to see if he can locate any publicity on the counterfeits but if you or Dave B. could have the official records of NH checked for counterfeit comment at that time I would appreciate that very much.

I will appreciate your further cooperation.

My best

Eric

Hi Eric-

I have only figured out the secret marks for three denominations of the NH June 20, 1775 issue [6s, 20s, 40s], and based on style have made guesses at the 1s—which I don't own, nor have Dave Bowers and I located a genuine example to scan. Do you own a genuine 1 shilling?

I don't know the limits of your AOL account for image size, so will send in four or five separate emails. These will contain images of the June 20, 1775 Paul Revere issue Cohen reprints I marked up with a digital red pen, compared to copies of the same design on my originals.

I own the reprints for earlier notes, but do not own any of the originals personally. Dave and I have scans of images in the Peabody-Essex museum and the AAS. I will look at these this afternoon.

Attached are images of the most obvious secret mark—the partial erasure of "June" in the June 20, 1775 date, which appears on all four denominations 1s, 6s, 20s, and 40s of the Cohen reprints.

I will send more images with secret marks in the design portion indicated later this morning.

Regards,

David

Dear David:

I presume you or D. Bowers bought the New Hampshire Revere bills so you can compare these to the reprints and determine what the secret marks are. I have found that a twig was added to the lower right part of the left stub vignette on the 20s and an tiny extra border strip at the right bottom of the 40s. Please find the changes for the others and let me know the detail promptly so I can write it in my new edition. Do you think there were secret marks on the reprints of earlier bills?

My best, Eric

Here are images of the 20 shilling and 40 shilling notes, Cohen reprints with marks circled in red, an image of the Cohen design before I marked it up in red, and the genuine note for comparison.

The next email will contain my "guess" as to the secret marks on the 1 shilling, based on the style of marks on the prior three denomination. They are my guess, as I don't have a genuine for comparison.

Hi Eric-

Here's the last email on the subject. This is my "guess" as to the secret marks on the 1 shilling Cohen reprints of the June 20, 1775 New Hampshire notes, based on the style of marks employed on the prior three denominations. They are my guess, as I don't have a genuine for comparison. I attach Cohen reprints with marks circled in red, and an image of the Cohen design before I marked it up in red.

While not a secret mark, the following is interesting from a design standpoint. I also attach the Cohen reprints of the 1756 Crown Point 6d design featuring a squirrel. I believe the squirrel is "echoed" in the Six shilling design of the New Hampshire June 20, 1775 note by Paul Revere, which is most easily seen in the Cohen reprint, as you can see the entire squirrel, as there is no "indented" portion. Perhaps this has been mentioned before somewhere by someone? I wonder if he used the same squirrel design on any denomination of the Massachusetts notes?

Hi Eric-

While trying to find something about the "J.Hull" signature I found on two NH April 29, 1780, I came across this small addition for your excellent 5th edition that you are working on. In the present edition, listing the New Hampshire signers of NH April 29, 1780 notes you give the first name for everyone but "E. Robinson." I went to the actual copy of the NH law, and it gives Robinson's first name as Ephraim Robinson:

"And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid that Messrs Joseph Pearson, Ephraim Robinson, and James McCluer all of Exeter be and hereby are appointed a committee to sign all such bills as belong to the quota of this state."

Eric-- I have not heard from you regarding my emails sent yesterday, did you receive them? I realize you are probably busy showing people your wonderful museum, and attending the Central States convention.

Eric-

See the attached images. Comparing the genuine 1756 3 shilling Crown Point note from the American Antiquarian Society to the Cohen reprint of the same denomination, I see no difference in the plate itself. No secret marks, as on the June 20, 1775 Paul Revere NH issues. I will look at other Cohen reprints and compare to the genuine, where Dave B. and I have examples on file.

I have a call in to the director of the NH Historical Society to see if they have the Revere plate. Like you, I hope the secret marks were not added to the original plate. <sup>N</sup>

When Dave B. and I took him to lunch a month ago, director Bill Veillette mentioned they had a plate, but did not know which one they had. Dave Bowers and I have not examined it yet.

Dave
